

Teapot Unneeded to Rally Women Voters

Any one who thinks that the campaign teapot is essential to getting out the women voters should have seen the large gathering of Republican women yesterday afternoon who sat on the hard benches reserved for the learners of the three R's in the public school building at Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-third Street, and listened to a long political program without hope of any edible reward.

It was a meeting of the women's organization of the 9th Assembly District, of which Mrs. Katherine T. Hammer is associate executive member, and was attended by many women who were prominent in club life before women were enfranchised. Mrs. William Gerry Slade, president of the Daughters of 1812, presided.

Former Representative Walter M. Chandler, now Major Chandler, made a speech in which he praised the Republican candidate for President of the Board of Aldermen, Frederic H. La Guardia, and denounced those who have sought to make a race and religion issue in his candidacy.

Other speakers were James O'Malley, candidate for Surrogate; Henry H. Curran, candidate for President of the Borough of Manhattan; Philip J. McCook, candidate for Justice of the Supreme Court, and W. Ferdinand Quinn, candidate for Alderman.

Charles H. Carstairs Dead

The headquarters of the Belgian Relief Commission here was notified by cablegram yesterday of the death of Charles Haseltine Carstairs, a member of the commission until the United States entered the war, and a son of the late Charles S. Carstairs, who was a member of the firm of M. Knodler & Co., art dealers. Mr. Carstairs died in Mariemont, Belgium, October 23. His death followed a surgical operation, it was stated.

Mr. Carstairs was a graduate of the Sheffield Scientific School of Yale University, and in 1914, together with several other former Yale students, he organized a scientific and hunting expedition to Turkey, Caucasia, Persia and India.

In March, 1915, Mr. Carstairs became a member of the American Commission for Relief in Belgium and remained with that commission until the United States entered the war, when he enlisted in the aviation corps.

Brand Whitlock, American Ambassador to Belgium, was best man for Mr. Carstairs in 1916, when he married Helen Ginnott, the daughter of the Burgomaster of Bellecourt, Belgium.

Mr. Carstairs' home was in Paris.

Dr. A. B. Simpson, Head Of Alliance Work, Dies

NYACK, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The Rev. Albert B. Simpson, seventy-five, president of the Christian and Missionary Alliance since 1897, died at his home here today.

Dr. Simpson was the son of James and Jane Clark Simpson and was educated at Knox College, Toronto, Canada. He was ordained in the Presbyterian ministry in 1865 and served as a pastor at Hamilton, Ont., Canada, for nine years. He then went to Louisville, where he served for seven years, coming to New York in 1881. He was the founder in 1887 of the Christian Alliance, which combined with the International Missionary Alliance in 1897 as the Christian and Missionary Alliance, of which he was made president and general superintendent, retaining those positions for the rest of his life.

His alliance sent out thousands of missionaries to many countries throughout the world and maintained the Missionary Training Institution, the Institution for Training of Home Workers and the Berean Home, College and Academy, all of which are located in Nyack.

Dr. Simpson was pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle, of New York, where he held daily services and did much to relieve the destitute. Dr. Simpson was noted during the first years of his missionary work for his ability to raise large sums of money for the cause. He raised $1,000,000 in 1897, his first year of work.

WHITNEY NEWTON

Whitney Newton, sixty-two, president of the Whitney Newton Lumber Company of Colorado, and owner of vast timber lands there, died Monday at his home in the Annapolis Apartments here, after a long illness. He was born at Cornell University in the class of 1879. Mr. Newton retired from business several years ago and traveled extensively in America, coming to New York two years ago. He was a member of many clubs in Colorado and was a thirty-second degree Mason. The body was taken to the Campbell Funeral Church, where services will be held today and then will be shipped to Pueblo for burial.

RICHARD E. PLUNKETT

Another of Theodore Roosevelt's old friends in his ranch life in the West died last night at Bellevue Hospital, where he had been operated upon for cancer. This was Colonel Richard E. Plunkett, who was almost equally known in Oklahoma and in Wall Street. He was born in Ireland fifty-eight years ago, a member of the numerous and important Irish family of his name, but in early life came to the United States and settled in the Far West.

He served for years as United States Marshal in Colorado and later in Oklahoma, and became a close friend of Theodore Roosevelt, at whose inauguration parade in 1905 he led a company of Indians from the plains, whom he had organized for the occasion.

Later he became extensively interested in the Texas oil industry, in association with Colonel Ben Garrett, and during the last few years was a familiar figure among the oil operators on Wall Street. He was active in politics in the West, and was a delegate to several Republican national conventions. He is survived by two sons, who served in the United States navy during the war.
